

Dear Editor:

In less than three seconds my life flashed before my eyes.

Just over two weeks ago, I was ejected from a car and could barely walk.

Today, I can walk with assistance. I've realized how precious life really is.

Life is way too short not to take chances or even risks. Tomorrow is NEVER promised to anyone. Live life to the fullest and love every single moment because you never know when you'll be taking your last breath and saying your last words. Make it count.

Feeling blessed,

Shania Stickley
