

By Jan Rahn

Managing Editor

Readers of The Grant Tribune -Sentinel now have another option when it comes to keeping up on community news.

A new E-edition has been added to the choices of how the paper can be enjoyed weekly.

The entire issue each week can now be viewed online with an E-edition subscription.

Check out the offer on the Tribune's website at www.granttribune.com

Each Thursday, readers can view the weekly issue online, closing the gap between the time the paper is printed and the time it takes for it to be mailed within the community, around the region and across state lines.

From now until the end of March, readers can take advantage of seeing an E-edition of the paper at no cost.

Go to the website, click on the E-edition tab, and look at the Tribune's weekly issue exactly how it appears as a paper copy. Everything is there—stories, photos, sports, advertisements, lifestyle, etc.

Readers have several options when viewing the weekly issue electronically, including zooming in, dragging, printing certain parts of a page, or clipping a certain section to email to a friend, for example.

Currently, the Tribune posts parts of the paper on the website, however, with the addition of the new E-edition, information and stories on the website will be on a more limited basis.

Get online and explore what the E-edition of The Grant Tribune-Sentinel has to offer.

A one-year subscription will be the same price as a regular local subscription of $29.50.