

Several community “town hall” meetings will be held across Perkins County during late March to receive input from local citizens regarding the future of the county.

The events are being hosted by the Perkins County Planning Commission to provide citizen input for updating Perkins County’s Comprehensive Plan.

The comprehensive plan provides information on the various assets of the area, a vision for the future, and various goals and objectives for providing a good environment for jobs, standard of living and raising families.

More details will be available in the coming weeks, or residents may contact from Chris Loeffler, Perkins County Planning and Zoning administrator, at 352-2703.
