

By Jan Rahn

Managing Editor

Three open seats on the Board of Education of Perkins County School will be filled on Nov. 2 when six candidates vie for one of the positions.

They include Ryan Hendricks, Amy Kroeker, Scott Osler, Jill Pelster, Michaela Potts and Shawn Stutzman.

Going off the board after several years of service to the district are Marian Glunz, Dan Hughes and Kent Kroeker. None of the incumbents filed for re-election this fall.

Of the three current members—Shawn Turner, Doug Beck and Jayson Bishop—only Turner has experience of more than one term. Both Beck and Bishop were elected in 2008.

The six non-incumbent candidates have answered six questions pertaining to their desire to serve the district, plus information on their families.

The answers for each question appear in alphabetical order.

1. Why and when did you become interested in serving as a school board member?

—Ryan Hendricks: As a 2000 graduate of Grant High School, I take pride in the strength of our school system and would like

Six candidates contend for three school board seats

